

Dear Sirs: I believe it is of great importance that the FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. Indiana's Telephone Privacy law has improved our time at home by eliminating unwanted soliciting. We used to receive at least 5 calls a day, now we receive none. Our days are more productive and our evening meals are not interrupted. I cannot imagine having to go back to unwanted, rude, pushy salespeople who do not take no for an answer calling me again. I have never and will never do business with any company that calls me at home without invitation. I have terminated my business with companies who continued to call to push new or different products. Please take this view into consideration, as it greatly impacts my family's way of life. Thank you.
